Maar die jaarringen kunnen je veel meer vertellen dan dat. Dendrochronologie, de wetenschappelijke studie van jaarringen, levert een niet te onderschatten bijdrage aan ons begrip van de klimaatgeschiedenis van de aarde, de invloed ervan op de menselijke beschavingen in de afgelopen tweeduizend jaar en de complexe interactie tussen mens en natuur. In dit meeslepende boek neemt topwetenschapper Valerie Trouet je mee op een reis rond de aarde, van haar lab in Arizona tot afgelegen dorpen in Afrika en radioactieve bossen in Rusland. Aan de hand van verrassende verhalen - zoals hoe zonnevlekken piraten beïnvloeden, het geheim achter het imperium van Dzjengis Khan, het verband tussen de Egyptische farao's en vulkanen, ja zelfs de rol van olijven in de val van het Romeinse Rijk - laat ze zien hoe de studie van bomen ons ontzettend veel kan leren over de mens, zijn geschiedenis en zijn toekomst. 'Ik ben een dendroklimatoloog. Aan de hand van jaarringen bestudeer ik het klimaat uit het verleden en de invloed ervan op ecosystemen en samenlevingen. In dit boek wil ik ook de verhalen van mijn collega-dendrochronologen meenemen en tonen hoe de dendrochronologie zich vanuit haar nederige begin heeft ontwikkeld tot een van de belangrijkste instrumenten om de complexe interacties tussen bossen, mensen en het klimaat te bestuderen. De rode draad in dit boek is de geschiedenis van houtgebruik en ontbossing, die dendrochronologen in staat heeft gesteld het verleden te bestuderen en een bijdrage te leveren aan de leefbaarheid van onze planeet in de toekomst. De reis verloopt via allerlei omwegen en zit vol verrassingen. Ik spreek over houtcellen die kleiner zijn dan de diameter van een mensenhaar en over straalstromen die op dezelfde hoogte als vliegtuigen over het hele noordelijk halfrond razen. Ik verbind die twee met elkaar door middel van verhalen over piraten, marsmannetjes, samoeraikrijgers en Dzjengis Khan. Kortom: ik vertel jaarringverhalen die mij fascineren. Waarom? Omdat ik denk dat er behoefte aan is in het huidige klimaat van wantrouwen en onverschilligheid jegens wetenschappelijke ontwikkelingen. Ik hoop dat u in het beste geval een kleine tinteling van opwinding voelt wanneer u iets nieuws opsteekt uit dit boek. Het is dezelfde tinteling die ons wetenschappers prikkelt om door te gaan met ons werk.' Winnaar Jan Wolkers Prijs 2020 voor het beste Nederlandstalige natuurboek

In an extraordinary debut novel, an escaped fugitive upends everything two siblings think they know about their family, their past, and themselves. When eleven-year-old Annie first started lying to her social worker, she had been taught by an expert: Gran. "If you're going to do something, make sure you do it with excellence,” Gran would say. That was when Gran was feeling talkative, and not brooding for days in her room — like she did after telling Annie and her little brother, Rew, the one thing they know about their father: that he was killed in a fight with an angry man who was sent away. Annie tells stories, too, as she and Rew laze under the birches and oaks of Zebra Forest — stories about their father the pirate, or pilot, or secret agent. But then something shocking happens to unravel all their stories: a rattling at the back door, an escapee from the prison holding them hostage in their own home, four lives that will never be the same. Driven by suspense and psychological intrigue, Zebra Forest deftly portrays an unfolding standoff of truth against family secrets — and offers an affecting look at two resourceful, imaginative kids as they react and adapt to the hand they’ve been dealt. From ZEBRA FOREST We called it the Zebra Forest because it looked like a zebra. Its trees were a mix of white birch and chocolate oak, and if you stood a little ways from it, like at our house looking across the back field that was our yard, you saw stripes, black and white, that went up into green. Gran never went out there except near dusk, when the shadows gathered. She didn’t like to be out in full sunlight usually, and told me once she didn’t like the lines the trees made. Gran was always saying stuff like that. Perfectly beautiful things — like a clean blue sky over the Zebra — made tears come to her eyes, and if I tried to get her to come outside with me, she’d duck her head and hurry upstairs to bed. But then it would be storming, lightning sizzling the tops of the trees, and she'd run round the house, cheerful, making us hot cocoa and frying up pancakes and warming us with old quilts. We had few rules in our house, but keeping out of the Zebra Forest in a storm was one of them.

This "stunning journey through a country that is home to exhilarating natural wonders, and a scarring colonial past . . . makes breathtakingly clear the connection between nature and humanity, and offers a singular portrait of the complexities inherent to our ideas of identity, family, and love" (Refinery29). A chance discovery of letters written by her immigrant grandfather leads Jessica J. Lee to her ancestral homeland, Taiwan. There, she seeks his story while growing closer to the land he knew. Lee hikes mountains home to Formosan flamecrests, birds found nowhere else on earth, and swims in a lake of drowned cedars. She bikes flatlands where spoonbills alight by fish farms, and learns about a tree whose fruit can float in the ocean for years, awaiting landfall. Throughout, Lee unearths surprising parallels between the natural and human stories that have shaped her family and their beloved island. Joyously attentive to the natural world, Lee also turns a critical gaze upon colonialist explorers who mapped the land and named plants, relying on and often effacing the labor and knowledge of local communities. Two Trees Make a Forest is a genre-shattering book encompassing history, travel, nature, and memoir, an extraordinary narrative showing how geographical forces are interlaced with our family stories.

Introduces the forest habitats that exist around the world and the various animals that live in them, including bears, chipmunks, and woodpeckers.

PAUL Paul stopped in a little open space, and looked around all the circle of the forest. Everywhere it was the same--just the curving wall of red and brown, and beyond, the blue sky, flecked with tiny clouds of white. The wilderness was full of beauty, charged with the glory of peace and silence, and there was naught to indicate that man had ever come. The leaves rippled a little in the gentle west wind, and the crisping grass bowed before it; but Paul saw no living being, save himself, in the vast, empty world.

This book is a beautiful and moving personal account of the Ainu, the native inhabitants of Hokkaido, Japan's northern island, whose land, economy, and culture have been absorbed and destroyed in recent centuries by advancing Japanese. Based on the author's own experiences and on stories passed down from generation to generation, the book chronicles the disappearing world—and courageous rebirth—of this little-understood people. Kayano describes with disarming simplicity and frankness the personal conflicts he faced as a result of the tensions between a traditional and a modern society and his lifelong efforts to fortify a living Ainu culture. A master storyteller, he paints a vivid picture of the Ainu's ecologically sensitive lifestyle, which revolved around bear hunting, fishing, farming, and woodcutting. Unlike the few existing ethnographies of the Ainu, this account is the first written by an insider intimately tied to his own culture yet familiar with the ways of outsiders. Speaking with a rare directness to the Ainu and universal human experience, this book will interest all readers concerned with the fate of indigenous peoples.

"Devastating attacks on Israel and the Saudi royal family fuel the Islamic divide between Sunni and Shi'a. The future of humankind is imperiled as their sectarian conflict escalates. US military commanders, meanwhile, are alarmed by a resurgence of intelligent visitations from another realm. Estefan, a Catholic priest quietly devoted to his rural New Mexico flock, confronts a desert apparition of the Virgin Mary who directs him to deliver an ultimatum. But he must first overcome his mistrust of her origin and true purpose. This unlikely hero engages two companions: Johnson, a wealthy former seminary roommate, failed Jesuit and irrepressible playboy; and Miguel, a talented Mexican-American teen athlete. They pool their talents and resources in an attempt to save Earth from worldwide catastrophe. Author Dan Wright has been investigating aerial phenomena for twenty-five years, including seven years as Deputy Director of the Mutual UFO Network, Inc. (MUFON). He has undertaken or overseen investigations of thousands of UFO cases -- ordinary people suddenly confronted by extraordinary events. This gripping novel draws from Wright's experiences and explores an all-too-possible future given the direction our politics, our nations and our religions are headed.
